

Rebecca Boykin

Senior Account Manager

With Taylor Johnson since: 2016

People around the office come to me for:
Tips for story hooks

People around the office avoid me for:
My tendency to engage in Big Ten rivalry talk (Go Badgers)

Three words that describe me are: In a sentence: Calm under pressure

When I was growing up I thought I'd be:
Music journalist – I once made my own magazine with articles about 1980s songs I liked.

Favorite Chicago building: Too many – Chicago is home to magnificent architecture. I love the Art Institute, and the former Smurfit-

Stone building (now the Crain Communications Building).

Favorite Halloween costume: My friends and I went as the different stages of Madonna.

On my Ipod: Madonna, The Head and the Heart, Sia, Michael Jackson, Erasure, Prince, Robyn

My favorite app: Waze – I'm realizing side streets are often the quickest path to where you're going.

What I like most about Taylor Johnson: The camaraderie

The worst job I ever had was: Cleaning rooms at Grand Canyon National Park – Hikers are particularly dirty after coming back from the canyon. I call it the best-worst job since I had the opportunity to take in the sunset over this natural wonder every day, and hike into the canyon a few times (including down and up in one day).

Most people don't know that I:
Helped build houses after college

My guilty pleasure is:
Celebrity news and chocolate (preferably together)
