

Mary Giovingo

Accounting Manager

---

Mary has always been a whiz with numbers and multitasking, and she's used it to her advantage throughout her career. After studying accounting and business management in college, Mary worked in numerous industries as a full-scope bookkeeper and account manager over her 30-year career. From banking to manufacturing, consumer products to public-sector consulting, and education to trucking logistics, Mary has demonstrated the finance skills across countless industries - far more than those listed here - to be a valuable team member for nearly any business.

As Taylor Johnson's accounting director, Mary enjoys the versatility of her role, as well as the juggling of tasks payables, receivables, banking, journal entries, balancing, reconciliations, cash flow analysis and financial reporting. She also values the human resource piece of her role at Taylor Johnson, tending to the payroll and to corporate benefits management.

When she's not working, she enjoys spending time outdoors, bike riding, playing water sports, visiting flea markets or attending festivals, and spending a lot of time with her immediate and extended family.